RE-APPORTIONMENT MEASURE
BILL PROVIDING FOR IN-CREASE OF 42 MEMBERS
IN HOUSE GOES THROUGH.

TARIFF BILLS AGAIN

Underwood Measure for Revision of Cotton Schedule Expected to Pass
This Evening—Free List Act
—Lorimer Probe.

Washington, Aug. 3.—The senate this afternoon adopted without a roll call, the House bill fixing the number of representatives in the next congress at 433, an increase of 42. As agreed to, the bill is changed only in two particulars from that passed by the house.

Both amendments were by Senator Burton, republican of Ohio. One provided that candidates for the house might be nominated in the same manner as candidates for governor.

The second provided that the redistricting should be done by the legislatures of the states, except in states where the initiative and referendum was in force, where such laws might be invoked to secure redistricting.

Underwood Bill to Pass.
With the democratic steam roller in good working condition, it was expected today that the House would pass the Underwood bill for revision of the cotton schedule before adjournment this evening.

The measure imposes an average of 27 per cent ad valorem on cotton manufactures as against an equivalent of about 48 per cent in the Payne-Aldrich bill.

Disagree on Amendments.
The House ways and means committee agreed to recommend to the House non-concurrence in the Senate amendments to the farmers' free list bill and request a conference with the Senate.

Lorimer Critic.
Ex-representative Charles A. White, in cross-examination by Judge Hancock, in the case before the Lorimer committee today, said he expected the draft in the Illinois legislature because he thought it clearly to the people to inform them of the corrupt conditions so they could correct them.

White questioned White regarding his religious record and moral principles. Hancock's cross-examination also elicited that White's income had ranged from $3 a day to $65 per month.

CAPTURE MEMBER OF GANG OF MURDERERS

Man Who Pulled Hindu Bathing Benches Under Water, Drowning Them and Robbing Bodies, Arrested at Delhi.

Delhi, Aug. 3.—More than twenty murders within the past few months are attributed by the police here to a gang, one of whose members has already been arrested and for the rest of whom the locality is being ransacked.

The murderers' custom was to hide in the river Jumna and to pull below the surface, drown and rob bathers wearing gold and silver ornaments so popular among the Hindus. For a long time mysterious drownings have been common in the Jumna. Many of the corpses have never been recovered and those which have finally floated ashore or have been fished from the stream, have invariably been stripped of jewelry.

In one day, recently, five boys disappeared while swimming in the river and a day or two later a Marwari woman with particularly heavy gold jewelry, bracelets and anklets was suddenly caught by someone below the surface of the water and nearly met a similar fate. It happened, however, that two other bathers were close by and when she screamed, both of them swam to the rescue and not only saved the woman but caught a Mohammedan man who was trying to drown her. Belief that an organized gang was engaged in the business was supported from the fact on account of the large number of drownings and later the prisoner is said to have made a confession, on the strength of which the police are conducting their present search.

Have To Discontinue Work At Mississippi Because of Low Water.—Improvements Planned on State Hatcheries.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 3.—The state fish commission has been collecting black bass from the sloughs and bays of that overflow during the high water on the Mississippi river bottoms. Many of these blackwaters have dried up owing to the drought and thousands of fish have perished. After collecting some 60,000 black bass and 200,000 other rough fish which were carried to the main channel of the river and the marlin, the employees of the commission were compelled by the low stage of water to discontinue the work.

Hatchery Improved.
The commission is doing much work in the way of permanent improvements at the Madison hatchery. The old wood construction around the ponds is badly decayed and looks unsightly. It will be replaced with concrete. Many improvements are also being made at the Delahed, Wild Rose and Bayfield hatcheries. New water conduits are being installed, new fish ponds built, and the old wooden hatching troughs are being replaced with galvanized iron which will last practically a lifetime.

To Inspect Sites.
The committee, of which the president of the commission is chairman, will inspect several sites for the location of the two new lake trout hatcheries to supply the waters of Lake Michigan and Green Bay. Neither of the new hatcheries will be built this year, but all arrangements will be completed so that the work can be commenced early in the spring so that the hatcheries will be ready for the supply of eggs in October, 1912.

TAX COMMISSION IS READY TO INSTALL ACCOUNTING SYSTEM

Within Few Months Local Forms of Government May Receive Plans for Uniform System of Handling Accounts.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., Aug. 3.—Within six months the Wisconsin tax commission will be ready to install a uniform system of accounts for any town, city, village or county. This result will follow several years of agitation by the commission and is the immediate effect of a new law drawn up by the commission which permits the installation of such a system of accounting at the request of any municipality, and when so installed it must be retained.

Numerous Advantages.
Under the system opportunity is given a municipality to engage expert aid from the state tax commission to examine into supposed irregularities in its accounts, the service to be rendered at cost. The presence of a uniform system of accounts will permit a ready knowledge of the status of the books, and will make accessible for anyone, it is contended, a definite statement of municipal transactions. Comparison of a municipality's accounts with those of other municipalities will thus be greatly simplified.

At Work Over Year.
The commission has been working on the subject of municipal accounts for a year or more, under authority given by the joint resolution, passed by the 1909 legislature. It has secured a two years' financial statement from municipalities, and the 1911 legislature gave it power actually to install the system. It is now busy in framing classifications and hopes to be ready to put them into practice early in the year 1912.

A. E. James, statistician for the commission, is in charge of this branch of the tax commission's work and five experts are engaged in it, as follows: Oscar B. Chayer, H. L. Hatch, H. E. Meyer.

Collects Information.
The commissioners will issue special bulletins from time to time on municipal accounting of Wisconsin cities.

The law gives the commission power also to collect annually from all town, city, village, county and other public officers information as to the assessment of property, collection of taxes, receipts from licenses and other sources, the expenditure of public funds for all purposes, and all other information that may be needed in the work of the commission.

CHARGE INHUMANITY AGAINST THE TURKS

Commander of Turkish Troops Said to Have Tried to Exterminate Albanian Catholic Population.

Cettigne, Aug. 3.—Gen. Torgut Pasha, who has been relieved as commander of the Turkish troops in the field against the Albanians, was not trying to put down the insurrection, according to the Montenegrin army officers who have personally investigated conditions on the Turkish side of the frontier, but to exterminate the entire Albanian Catholic population. He is said to believe that those people will never remain permanently peaceable under Turkish rule and to consider that Turkey will be better off if they are completely wiped out. Ibrahim Efendi Klori, a high Turkish official at Scutari, is quoted, indeed, as saying openly that the plan is to let them "die like swine in a bog."

The rebellion this year followed a Turkish attempt to force Turkish customs and settlement upon the Albanians, to crush them under an unbearable load of taxation and to draft the young men, as soldiers, to the most distant parts of the empire. When Torgut took the field, he fell first upon the warlike Mollat in the north, killed as many as possible and drove across the frontier into Montenegro. Then he drew a strong cordon of troops along the frontier to keep them there. Next he forced the Shala and Shkua clansmen at that time inaccessible hillside to the southwest, from the hills into their villages and out of their food supply, notifying them that there would be no more for them until they surrendered their weapons. Knowing that this was intended as a mere preliminary to their slaughter, the tribesmen refused and are being rapidly starved out. In fact, the attack which the Shala people were recently reported to have made upon the Turks at Trabolia was nothing but a desperate attempt to break through the Turkish cordon into Montenegro after food for their starving wives and children. Of these tribesmen there are about 8,000.

LINK AND PIN. NEW LAW PUZZLES RAILWAY OFFICIALS

Law Regulating Inspection of Boilers and Reports on Same Bewilders Legal Officers of Different Roads.

Because the legal departments of the various railways can come to no definite understanding concerning the correct interpretation of the recent federal statute affecting the inspection of boilers no definite instructions have been issued as yet to the local shop foremen.

Frequent Inspection.
This new law makes it necessary to inspect boilers more frequently than formerly and a new system of reporting such inspections must be followed.

The chief difficulty in the interpretation of the law seems to be with reference to these reports.

On some roads the requirements are interpreted differently than on others and the officers of the different companies seem to prefer to come to some definite understanding before making any changes in the present system.

They are at work now trying to get some final and decisive ruling on which to base their plans.

Nothing Done Here.
Nothing has been done in the local shops up to the present that will be affected by this part of the new law, and it is not expected that any of the regular inspection reports will be made until definite instructions are forwarded from the central offices.

Some of the new plates showing the results of pressure tests which, according to the new law, must be placed on each engine, have appeared already on engines sent out from the central yards. The local engines, however, have not been supplied owing to the fact that the demand has been so great for them that it has not been possible to supply the required number to the various divisions of the roads.

Switch-tender Con Cronin will be absent from his duties tomorrow to attend the funeral of his uncle, Michael Cronin, who died yesterday morning at the age of 82.

HARTWIG PLANS FOR VIGOROUS CAMPAIGN ON BOVINE DISEASE

New State Veterinarian Proposes Most Systematic Campaign for Ridding State of Tuberculosis.

Rock county dairymen will be interested to know of the plans which will shortly be instituted and which have been recently announced by the new state veterinarian, Dr. H. A. Hartwig, to rid the state of bovine tuberculosis. His predecessors in the office have done much to eradicate the disease, but Dr. Hartwig plans to make the final effort to entirely expell this disease from Wisconsin.

Plans Announced.
No longer will the administration of tuberculosis test be authorized by the department, said Dr. Hartwig, except at the hands of competent, qualified persons.

To get at the source of contamination as well as to get rid of responding individuals in the herd will be the aim of the department in its future work, and to this end a plan is being inaugurated that will locate a deputy of the department in every part of the state. A searching civil service examination is to be first held to determine the fitness of candidates for permission to administer the test, as Dr. Hartwig explained. Then instructions will be given that when herds are found to be infected, a clinical examination of the individuals of the herd shall be made by a competent veterinarian to discover any chronic cases therein.

Dr. Hartwig explained that these cases do not usually respond to the tuberculin test and that while they are the greater menace to the herd they are only revealed by the tests of the experienced practitioner. To find them and clean the herd completely is the only system of eradication that can be successful, is the view of the doctor.

New Law Improved.
The new tuberculosis law, Dr. Hartwig thinks, will prove more satisfactory than the former regulation in that while it does not make the test compulsory it offers to the owner a greater inducement to co-operate with the department. The maximum compensation for condemned animals is raised from $55 to $60. Then, too, the doctor said that it would be the aim of the department to protect owners from needless sacrifice of valuable animals. Care will be taken that unaffected animals shall not be condemned and slaughtered, thus giving an assurance that will breed confidence.

Dr. Hartwig further explained that while the law provides at present for an increased compensation for slaughtered animals, all compensation is to cease after July 1, 1913. This, too, will tend to put the herd owner on his guard. This will serve to secure operation on the part of owners, and as soon as root weathier comes the doctor expects a lively campaign.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT BY HIS PLAYMATE

Herbert Gray of Milton Junction Wounded By Bullets From Gun In Hands of Darrell Sullivan of Janesville.

While playing with guns Tuesday afternoon, Herbert Gray of Milton Junction, was accidentally shot in the arm and shoulder by Darrell Sullivan of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. Phil Sullivan. The shock of the accident caused young Gray to fall from the tree a distance of some twelve or fourteen feet, lighting on his shoulders.

Other than a bad shaking up he was not seriously hurt, although his face and neck were quite badly scratched by stray shots from the shotgun. The young man is confined to his bed, recovering from his injuries, which, it is thought, will not be permanent or disabling him.

Sullivan was in Milton Junction visiting his grandmother, and the two boys, who are great chums, had been playing Indian together part of the day, with a rifle and a shotgun. The shotgun had been loaded, but when the boys started playing, Sullivan removed the charge.

After a while the boys became tired of the game and Sullivan went for a swim, putting the shell back in the gun. Returning from his plunge he found Gray perched in the tree, picking up the gun, young Sullivan, forgetting it was loaded, turned the weapon in Gray's direction and pulled the trigger. He was hurrying to see his companion fall from the tree.

CRUSADE TO CLEAN THE RIVER BANKS

Amount of Filth and Debris Along the Banks of Stream is Cause for Present Agitation.

Collections of filth, rubbish and debris on the banks of Rock River within the city limits, must be removed at once, is the dictum of Mayor Nichols and the city officials who have declared a crusade against conditions which are existing at present. In many places in the business district the appearance of the river bank is most deplorable, from the amount of waste, and old tumbled down shacks which are located at the edge of the stream. These obstructions are in violation of the city ordinance and are considered as a menace to the public health. Property owners who have allowed debris to accumulate on their property will be notified to remove it shortly, if they do not take action at once.

In the opinion of the health officer and physicians of the city, the health of the city is seriously endangered by the presence of such refuse as is seen from Milwaukee street bridge in the accompanying picture. In addition to this such objects on the banks of the river are most unsightly and tend to give a bad impression of the city. War is declared on existing conditions and action will be taken if they are not remedied at once.

KITCHENER AT KHARTOUM.

One of England's greatest dilemmas lies in its government of the mysterious old biblical country of Egypt. Ever since the days of the Exodus the children of Israel from its confines, Egypt has been towed hither and yon in the political world of nations. England today holds the whip hand, as it were, and to control the turbulent people it must have a strong hand and a wise head in control.
The news that Lord Kitchener of Khartoum will proceed in September next to take up the office of consul-general and British agent in Egypt has been received with extraordinary satisfaction by the European colony there, and with tempered complacency by the native. No greater compliment, perhaps, could have been paid to the new consul than that native opinion should be content to wait upon the event. In England there is undoubtedly considerable pleasure in the fact that the government has at last found a means of employing the youngest field marshal, even the advanced radicals being content to adopt the famous saying of the prime minister and wait and see.
The readiness of the representatives of so many interests to at least give Lord Kitchener the opportunity of developing his policy is a proof of the extraordinary manner in which the field marshal has impressed men with his independence of judgment and action. A soldier by profession, it is less as a fighter than a pro-consul that his reputation has been made. One of the most pathetic incidents of the story of Carlyle's life was the craving of the man who had written of men of action to be a man of action himself. In the cramped seclusion of the little house in Croydon he put aside with disgust offers of titles and ribbons, and dreamed of what he might have accomplished as the ruler of the teeming millions of India or the Dutch farmers of the veldt. What Carlyle would have done in such circumstances is only a degree more problematical than what Lord Kitchener will do. The one thing which is humanly certain is that so long as he holds the reins of power he will do what seems good to him, though all the officials of Whitehall and Cairo should rise in protest.
Lord Kitchener has the reputation of being a hard man, a tremendous worker who, in the cause of his country, never considers the feelings or labors of those who serve under him. Yet, in every difficult position in which he has ever been found, he has acted with a tactful consideration not unworthy of the great Duke of Marlborough, of whom it was said that those who left him the most displeased as to their business left him the most delighted with his reception of them. His chivalrous conduct to Major Mareland was largely instrumental in taking the sting out of the Fashoda incident. In South Africa, though while the war lasted, he pursued the Boer commandos relentlessly, his tactful handling of the final negotiations made possible the peace of Vereeniging. Today, in South Africa not less than in North Africa, he is remembered with respect and admiration. Essentially an organizer, he conquered the Sudan with the rail-way, and today he returns to take up and complete the labors he laid down when he resigned the starship.

ADVERTISING AN INDEX.

That advertising is an index of a city's or country's prosperity is an undisputed fact. A social observer will judge a people by its methods of doing business as readily and as accurately as he will by its art, literature or domestic life. A statesman finds in the advertising pages of the journals of a rival nation's press his best contemporary index of that nation's economic and industrial status, its relative enterprise and resourcefulness and the way in which it is tending. For this reason it was that Gladstone always insisted on seeing the American editions of the leading American magazines. Their text he treasured him much, but their advertisements more, so he frankly said. From the text he often got interesting sidelights on new phases of problems of government, theology and literature about which men had been disputing for ages. But from the advertisements he got a record of the example of a self-reliant, resourceful, versatile people with problems of economics, industry, application of physical science to manufacturing and of efficient modes of marketing goods that he could not get from the text of the magazines or from state papers by official investigators.
Gladstone, the statesman, read American advertisements for the same authoritative light on contemporary economic evolution that Rhodes, the American historian, sought on national political evolution when he sent his corps of investigators to the files of the American press. And it is in this larger light that both advertising agents and "experts" and the public can look upon advertising. If they will to view it large.

It rightly appraised, advertising is something more than "brokerage in publicity," the placing of new business, the bringing of maker and user, producer and consumer, together. Estimated as Gladstone valued it, advertising becomes the unconscious and therefore more voracious chronicle of the life of the time, registering in an attractive way the many sided activities of a people and forming a record as useful to the contemporary responsible statesman as it will be later to the social historian. Just as knowledge that historians now rate higher than formerly the newspaper as a source of information and opinion gives a higher tone to journalism, so the broad view of advertising, kept in mind by those whose business it is to frame and to place advertisements, naturally must have an uplifting and wholesome effect.

GET BUSY!

Under the provisions of the new state aid law (Chapter 237, Laws of 1911) towns can get county and state aid for almost any kind of permanent road improvement. If they have voted a tax, or will prior to Sept. 1st, 1911, vote for the improvement.
The new law is unique among state aid laws in the fact that it covers not only the work of grading, draining and surfacing with stone or gravel, but also includes earth road work of a permanent nature, such as cutting down hills, relocating roads around hills, unconsolidating swampy places, making ditches across swamps, and in fact, any work that will produce a lasting improvement. It is expected that the state, county and town will each pay one-third of the cost of road work. A town must vote a tax of at least $100 for improving a road.
Any bridge over six feet in span can also be built with state aid under the new law. It is expected that the state will pay 20 percent and the county and town each 40 percent of the cost of bridges. A town must vote a tax of at least $250 for building a bridge or bridges.

All roads and bridges improved under the law must be in the prospective system of state highways selected or to be selected for each county by its county board. Towns must vote taxes for 1912 work on or before Sept. 1st, 1911, and town boards must petition the county board through the county clerk on or before September 1st, 1911.
Counties which wish to build roads in 1912 with county and state funds alone must vote a county tax before Oct. 1st, 1911. But if a county wishes to proceed in the usual way with the town, county and state each sharing the cost, no action by the county board is necessary until the November, 1911, election.

Will Taft veto these two measures that congress has passed or will he sign them and give the democrats and their allies an opportunity to further delay with the tariff? That is what official Washington wants to know.
The business men of Janesville are much in earnest about that lighting proposition and mean to bring the matter up before the council for further consideration.
Building good houses for citizens who do not own their own homes is an investment that looks into the future prosperity of the whole community.
As yet the English Lords refuse to realize that their veto power is about as handy to them as the cue of the Chinaman who had his head shaved.

Senator Bailey wished to have Johnson on the free list. Why? Is the question that bothers his other statesmen friends.

Cuba is not really tired of peace, but then they had to have some sort of an excitement just to keep pace with Mexico.

The question is what should be done for the person who says, "How do you feel after your vacation?"

One of the great features of the recent war scare in Europe was that it did not even frighten anybody.

Bird women are the newest species of the aerial tribe of humans to attempt to cope with the elements.

Chicago is to have seventy cent gas. How is that for a victorious end of a long, drawn out battle.

PRESS COMMENT.

Becomes Customary.
Madison Democrat: The Oshkosh Northwestern boasts of the increasing popularity of its bathing benches. All of which news to show that with increasing civilization the bath becomes more and more an occasional requirement.

A Philanthropic Deal.
Menominee Herald Leader: And now it is suggested that if it develops that the Maine was blown up entirely from the inside we ought in all fairness to fund back the Philippines to Spain. But we took the Philippines as a matter of mortality, didn't we, not to pay for our bathhouse.

The Prevailing Cry.
Rochester Times: It looks as if the packing interests are getting ready to boost the price of meats again. Their statisticians and business agents are beginning to prophesy a great scarcity of fat cattle in the fall and that prices are certain to go up.
This cry of scarcity is becoming an annual event almost as familiar as the yearly yell from Delaware and Michigan of a failure of the peach crop.

Modern Methods.
Marquette Eagle Star: And now they are selling newspapers in slot machines in New York city and this method of handling their sale will probably extend to all the big cities of the country in a short time. It will mean that the next generation will miss the cry of the "newsies" which has heretofore been one of the distinctive features of city life. In ten years' time the horse and the newsboy will be practically eliminated from the metropolitan centers.

The Work Cure.
Evening Wisconsin: New York has adopted legislation under which it will experiment with state farms for tramps. It is confidently believed that the confirmed vagrant can not fail to benefit from the routine of regular living, hard work and instruction which it is planned to put in force at the farm colony. The New York Tribune asserts that industrial colonies maintained by private philanthropy for the "down and out" have proved that it is not at all impossible for clean, regular living and work to restore long forgotten self-respect and decency. There would seem to be warrant for the Tribune's declaration that it will be better to commit the hoboes gathered in clearing the park benches to the farm colony than to send them to "the island."

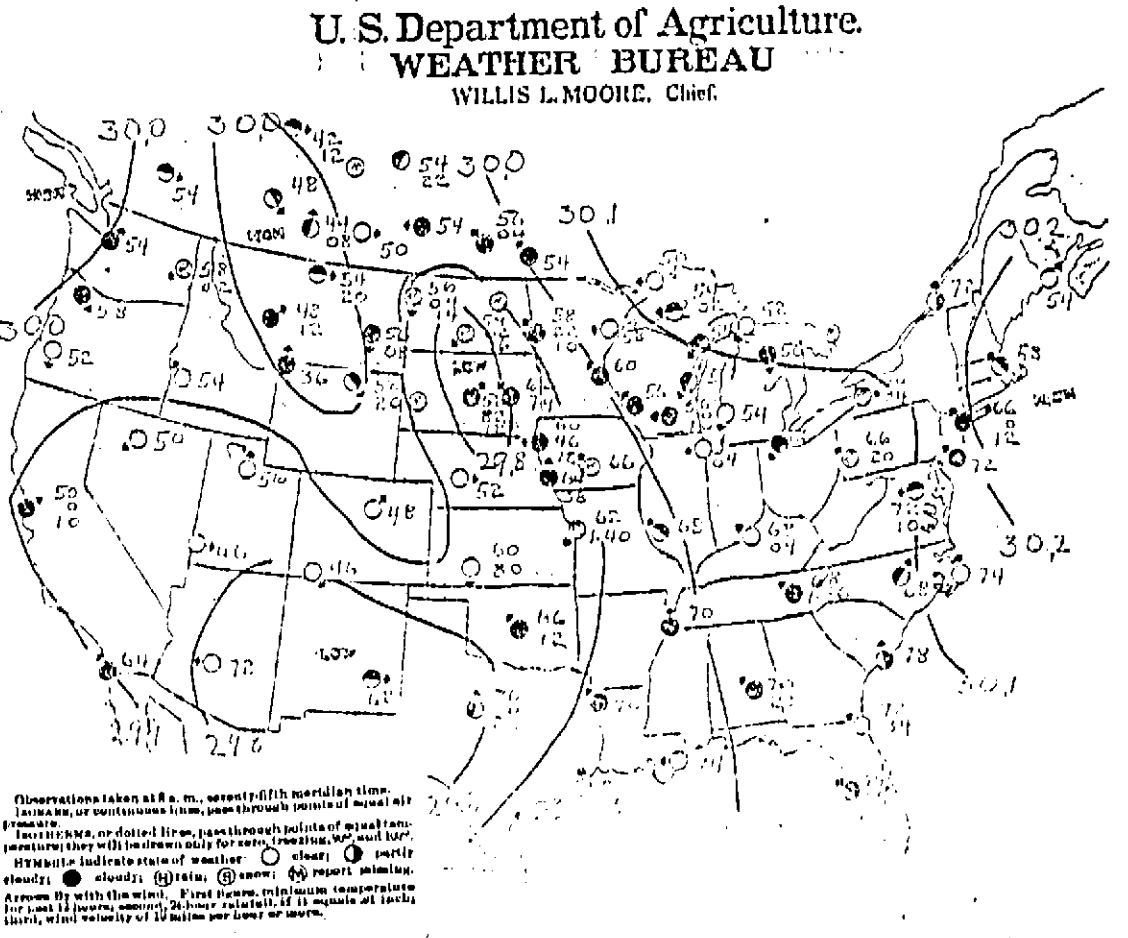

Our Extravagant Craze.

Chicago Examiner: Are we to be known as the nation of automobilists? According to Edward Bernhardt, we have already qualified for that doubtful honor. "An American," he says, "who does not own an auto considers himself as out of grace, as a Spectator without a mantle, a German without his pipe, an English woman without her pocket mirror."
"American chauffeurs drive cleverly by instinct; I never saw a country with so many automobiles as America. I saw society women driving machines in Chicago and miners with their lamps fastened on their caps returning home in cars of their own. As soon as he has a little money the American buys an automobile."
It is all true. If the divine Sarah knew the number of homes that have been mortgaged to procure these same automobiles, she might have something to add to her accurate observations.

UNCLE WALT THE POET PHILOSOPHER (Copyright, 1909, by George Matthew Adams.) By WALT MASON.

One more illustration recent has joined the shining talismanic band; the people heard his lyrics too across this old talkative land. He talked upon the eastern shore, WOODROW he talked beside the WILSON western sea, the prairie lands have heard him fear the platitudes that make men tame. He talked so loudly as he went that people said: "This noisy man is just the stuff for president and will elect him if we can." And I've no doubt that he will win if he should have the chance; for he who makes the loudest din is always certain to advance. I'd like to see what fore I crank one president of giant size; some man who let a trail of smoke and scrawled his name across the skies. Some builder who has laid the hills across the desert and the hills; some strong man who has filled the valleys with changing of a hundred mills. The labors of the builders can but little please the voting host; we hear the honors on the man who talks the loudest and the most.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

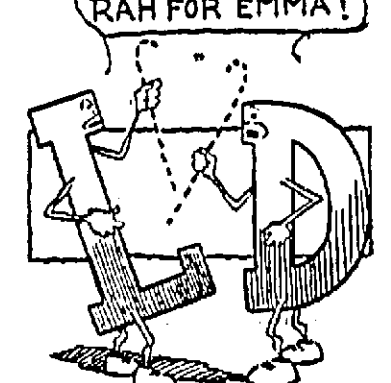

The barometric depression that was over the southern plateau region yesterday has swung around at its northern end. It now stretches around the southern end of the

U. S. Department of Agriculture. WEATHER BUREAU WILLIS L. MOORE, Chief.

Rocked and thence northward over the plains. General rains have topped it during the past 24 hours in the Missouri valley, on the eastern slope of the Rocky mountains, and in the northern Rocky mountain region. The rainfall was heaviest in the Missouri valley, the greatest fall being 1.40 inches at Kansas City. The weather is also unsettled and showery in the Ohio valley and southeastern states. A rainfall of 1.36 inches is reported at Knoxville. It will probably be showery in this vicinity tonight and Friday, without much change in temperature.

Heart to Heart Talks. By EDWIN A. NYE.

LIVE BY THE DAY.
You are under contract to live your life.
How will you do it—by the day or by the job?
If you live by the job you are apt to be always getting ready to enjoy the performance.
If you live by the day you are likely to get something out of life.
It is well enough to plan for the future and work to your plans, but you should get something out of life every day.
We live too much in prospect.
We will enjoy life—when we get fixed for it. We will be happy—tomorrow or next day. We will be useful to our generation—when we get time for it. We will read and think and love—no soon as we get to it.
In consequence we live and die in expectancy.
If we are to live at all and love and help and study and enjoy it must be today.
Marcus Aurelius, the Roman emperor, learned the secret 1,800 years ago and in his golden book has revealed it. I know of no book aside from the New Testament, that is so well adapted to the use of the average person whose lot is hard and disappointing.
Marcus Aurelius had to do about everything he did not want to do.
He despised pomp and circumstance, but had to be an emperor. He loved study and had to spend much of his life at the head of an army.
Nevertheless he discovered how to live every day so as to get something out of that day.
He was never so tired that he could not find something worth while in the conditions. One of his methods was to study some person about him, select the best quality—never the worst quality—and try to imitate that person at his best.
He never had a grouse. He lived every day as if it were the only day. Let us also live today.
Today you can get a little reading, a little exercise, a little diversion, a little love (do not economize on the love) and a little inspiration.
Count that day lost whose law descending sun has brought you neither joy nor sympathy nor entertainment nor betterment.
Live by the day.
The contract is big and complicated considered as a job. It is greatly simplified when you work on it by the day.

How the Rock County Telephone Co. Advertises Its Position and the Merits of Competition

In these days of attempted monopoly, keen competition has its domain of power and achievement.
Competition—sincere, aggressive and progressive—is the fundamental principle upon which the success of the Rock County Telephone System has been built.
The splendid service given by The Rock Co. lines is the direct result of its independence and its aggressive and progressive policies.
Competition means efficiency! Competition means constant improvements of the equipment and abilities of the competing company, and the public benefits directly by these improvements, because of the company's desire to please and demonstrate its own superior and distinctive merits.
A distinguished justice recently said: "There is no stronger inducement to the managers of a public service corporation to serve the public well, than a healthy apprehension that a rival concern will do so."
Compare the present efficient service of the Rock County lines with the monopolistic service as it was some years back, before the Rock County Telephone Company entered the field and when progressive competition did not exist.

The business interests of Janesville demand telephone competition.

The Rock County Telephone Company has been, and is today, the only bulwark, in Rock County, between the public and telephonic monopoly. This company has made marvelous strides in advance. Its service is most complete—it's efficient. Its equipment is modern, employs the most expert and its offices conveniently located.

If competition ceases, monopoly will obtain, service will retrograde, and progress will cease!

CHICAGO FRESH AIR CHILDREN ARRIVED IN THE CITY TODAY

Twenty-four Little Girls and Boys From the Chicago Poor Districts Were Brought Here This Morning.

This morning, under the care of Miss Eleanor King, who had gone to Chicago to get them, twenty-four children from the poor district of that city were brought to Janesville on the 10:35 train. The full number, who were to have come was twenty-five, but one little girl was left behind and will not reach Janesville until this evening. These youngsters were brought here by the Summer Club of Household Economies, who for a number of years have done the same thing.

All of the little folks have been given a chance thus to get out into the fresh open air, and in the clear sunshine, away from the smoke and dirt of the great city, are all under thirteen years of age, and the two weeks which they will spend here will be a great event in their lives. They will go to live during their stay, in the country, as many, that is, as could be provided with country homes, but the few who could not thus be arranged for, will be kept in town, which itself will be a great change for them. The children have been divided among ten different ladies, so that the burden on any one would not be too large, the following ladies will entertain the little visitors for the next two weeks: Mrs. H. Waterman, Mrs. M. S. Kellogg, and Mrs. Alsworth of Janesville; Mrs. George Scott, of Avalon; Mrs. Hildie Gunn, of Afton; Mrs. G. L. Raley, of Beloit; Mrs. W. Porter, of Cookville; Mrs. John Ellis, of Hannover; Mrs. J. E. Wilson and Mrs. J. H. Day, of Janesville.

The ladies of the Economies Club are doing a work of great good when they bring these little children out into the country, and the committee of ladies, which has had the matter in charge and has given time to the arrangements deserve great commendation for the work which they have done so successfully.

THREE WEEKS OF GOSPEL MEETINGS WILL BE HELD

Evangelist R. H. Simpson began first of series of services last night at corner of Vista and Garfield.

Evangelist R. H. Simpson, assisted by Mrs. Simpson and C. H. Howard, opened a series of gospel meetings last evening in the gospel tent at the corner of Vista and Garfield avenues. The plans for the services are to make them like the genuine old fashioned revival meetings, with greatest amount of good to the greatest number. Mr. Simpson has had experience in his work in several lands. He is a native of England where he had had charge of many large meetings. He has been at work in the United States for about twenty months. A cordial invitation is extended to the Janesville public to be present at the meetings which begin every evening at eight o'clock.

Special clearance of trimmed millinery, at $100 each. Mrs. Walker at Simpson's. See window.

DEATH CALLS EARLY SETTLER OF COUNTY

Joseph Spence, For Many Years Resident of Cookville, Dies At Sister's Home Near Edgerton.

Joseph Spence, a resident of Rock County for over sixty years, the largest part of which was spent in the vicinity of Cookville, passed away at the home of his sister, Mrs. B. Hardwick, near Edgerton, about half past five o'clock this morning. Death came following an illness of about three weeks.

Mr. Spence was born in Yorkshire, England in the year 1835. When a boy of ten years he came to the United States with his parents who settled at Cookville, Rock County, immediately upon their arrival in their adopted country. It was here that Mr. Spence received the greater part of his education and training, and after the death of his parents he remained on the old homestead and personally attended to the duties of the farm. His wife died a number of years ago, when he moved to Janesville, and purchased a farm west of the city, where he lived for several years. Later he made his home with relatives in this city and with his sister, residing near Edgerton, at whose home he died.

As one of the older residents of the county Mr. Spence had witnessed its growth and prosperity and was vitally interested in its progress. He had a large circle of friends among the older citizens with whom he had helped to shape the destiny of his community and the county.

He left no children but is survived by one brother and four sisters: Mrs. Thomas Little and Mrs. Walter Little of Janesville; Mrs. Henry Thompson of Stoughton; and Mrs. B. Hardwick of Edgerton; and Bartholomew Spence of this city. He also leaves a large number of nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

CENTENARY OF BIRTH OF GREAT INVENTOR

Elissa G. Otis Who Devised Elevators with Safety Device Born 100 Years Ago in Halifax, Vt.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Boston, Mass., August 3.—One hundred years ago there was born in the little town of Halifax, Vt., a man whose inventive genius led the way for the erection of the skyscraping buildings that now distinguish every American city, and incidentally added millions of dollars to the value of real estate.

The man was Elissa G. Otis. His invention was the elevator, undoubtedly one of the most important and useful inventions of the nineteenth century. Without the facilities offered by the elevators for reaching any desired height the tall buildings of today, it is hardly necessary to state, would be wholly impractical.

Otis began life as a farmer, but his inventive genius led him to turn to mechanical pursuits. After engaging in various lines of manufacturing in Albany, Troy and one or two other places he finally located in Yonkers, where he was given charge of the erection of some buildings for a manufacturing company.

In erecting the buildings it became necessary to construct an elevator for use on the premises, and in connection with this Mr. Otis devised a plan to prevent the fall of the platform in case of the breaking of the hoisting cables. It was this safety device that brought the elevator into practical use.

Mr. Otis first demonstrated the safety and utility of his invention at the International exposition held in New York City in 1853. Within a few years thereafter the elevator system came into public buildings. The old Fifth Avenue Hotel, which was torn down only a few years ago, was the first to install an elevator and for a long time it was an object of much curiosity to all visitors to the metropolis.

Mr. Otis lived to see his invention come into general use not only in America but throughout a large part of the world. He established a factory for the construction of his elevators in Yonkers, where he resided until his death in 1861. While his name will always be inseparably linked with his invention of the elevator he was fertile in other lines of invention and improvement, among his products being a machine for making binders, an automatic wood-turning machine, a steam plow, and a rotary oven for use in the making of bread.

HANSON BASEBALL TEAM ENTERTAINED LAST NIGHT

Party Was Given in Appreciation of Recent Victories and in Honor of Catcher Miller's Birthday. In appreciation of their heroic and valorous efforts in the field of sport during the summer and also in honor of the birthday of Catcher Miller, the Hanson baseball team was most royally entertained last evening by Sidney Hudson at his home, 512 North Hickory street. At eight o'clock a sumptuous dinner was served, followed by toasts and talks by the various members of the team, in which many worthy ideas of the game, of which these men are past masters, were set forth. The party broke up at a late hour, having enjoyed a most delightful time.

The One That Suffered. A colored blacksmith in Georgia was recently engaged in shoeing a mule when the mule switched around suddenly and kicked him on the head.

A few days afterwards some one asked the mule's owner if the blacksmith was much hurt. "I don't know anything about the blacksmith," he said, "but I know one thing, I've got a tool mule that's going around on three legs."

HEALTH FILMS WILL BE SHOWN TONIGHT

Exhibition in Campaigning Against Tuberculosis Will be Given in Court House Park.

Harvey De Brown, representative of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association, arrived in the city this morning, and will exhibit the health films which have been shown in twenty-two cities of the state in the campaign against tuberculosis and consumption.

The motion films will be shown in the court house park this evening soon after eight o'clock. They will include three motion picture films: The Red Cross Seal, showing the typical breeding places of the white plague, and methods of treatment in the open air. An interesting story is told by the pictures which also bring out the lesson.

The Fly Pest is another of the films showing the dangers of the common house fly and how it aids in the spread of disease germs.

The last film is The Man Who Learned, which tells the story of improving the milk supply in a large city. It is an interesting drama of real life which cannot fail to appeal.

In addition to the moving picture films there will be shown some twenty-five stereopticon views which will be explained by Mr. Brown who will deliver a short lecture on the work of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society, which is allied with the University Extension Department.

There remain but two cities to be visited to complete the campaign through the state. The films were exhibited at Watertown yesterday and tomorrow Beloit will be favored. Racine is the last city on the route.

The expenses of the trip are paid from the sale of the Christmas stamps. It is hoped that there will be a large number of Janesville people present at the park tonight to see something and learn something of this dread disease and what is being done to eradicate it in the state of Wisconsin.

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

By W. A. MACY.

AN UNDIGNIFIED CHIEF JUSTICE.

The Geneva tribunal of Arbitration, which settled the controversy between the United States and England concerning the Alabama claims, awarded damages to the former in the sum of $15,500,000. But the verdict was not unanimous. One of the five arbitrators, Sir Alexander Cockburn of England, submitted a dissenting opinion. For a dozen years, Sir Alexander had been Lord Chief Justice of England, and one would expect him to be dignified in bearing and judicial in temperament. But all through the trial he acted more like a petty lawyer in a justice court than an arbitrator in a great international dispute. He differed from his colleagues on almost every point, great and little, and made himself generally disagreeable. In speaking of the closing session of the tribunal Caleb Cushing, one of the attorneys for the United States, said: "The instant the president finished reading the award, and before the sound of his last words had died on the ear, Sir Alexander Cockburn snatched up his hat and, without participating in the leave-taking around him, without a word or sign of courteous recognition for any of his colleagues, rushed to the door and disappeared, in the manner of a criminal escaping from the dock, rather than of a judge separating, and that forever, from his colleagues on the bench."

man will be at our office next Monday to demonstrate this wonderful water heater. You should be interested in this heater because it is always on the job, ready any minute, day or night, to heat water steaming hot and send it rushing to any faucet you may open. There is no delay—no gas to light. The RUUD awakens at the turn of a faucet—lights its own gas—heats instantaneously the water flowing through its copper coils—extinguishes itself automatically when you close the faucet. It is placed down in the cellar and requires no attention. You are invited to attend the

Nothing but praises for this noble work. We have been told repeatedly by art critics who have visited the great galleries in London, Paris, Versailles, New York, Milwaukee, etc., that no painting ever appealed to them more than The Village Blacksmith it is so unusually natural and lifelike—it's a winner—Will be on exhibition until Saturday night, Aug. 5.

The Taming of Red Butte Western

by FRANCIS LYNDE

Copyright, 1911, by Charles Scribner's Sons.

CHAPTER XVII. THE SHADOWGRAPH.

FORTY-TWO miles southwest of Angels, at a point where all further progress seemed definitely barred by the huge barrier of the great mountain range, the Red Butte Western, having picked its devious way to an apparent cul-de-sac among the foothills and hogbacks, plunges abruptly into the echoing canyon of the eastern Tinnayont.

For forty miles miles the river channel, throughout its length a narrow, tortuous crevice, affords a precarious footing for the railway embankment. At its western extremity the canyon forms the gateway to a shut in valley of upheaved hills and interior mountains isolated by wide stretches of rolling grass land. To the eastward and westward of the great valley rise the southern peaks of the two enclosing mountain ranges.

Red Butte, the center of the evanescent mining excitement which was originally responsible for the building of the railroad, lies high pitched among the shoudering spurs of the western boundary range. On the south bank of the river, at a point a short distance beyond the stream fronting cliffs, lies the landmark hill known as Little Butte, and at the station of the same name is the bridge across the Tinnayont.

On the engineering maps of the Red Butte Western the outline of Little Butte appears as a roughly described triangle with five mile sides, the three angles of the figure marked respectively by Silver Switch, Little Butte station and bridge and the Wire Silver mine.

Between Silver Switch and the bridge station the main line of the railroad follows the base of the triangle, with the precipitous bluffs of the big hill on the left and the torrenting flood of the Tinnayont on the right. Along the eastern side of the triangle and leaving the main track at Silver Switch ran the spur which had formerly served the Wire Silver mine, the working opening of the mine had been on the eastern slope of the ridge-like hill. For some years previous to the summer of overturnings this spur had been disused, though its track, ending among a group of the old mine buildings five miles away, was still in commission.

Along the western side of the triangle, with Little Butte station for its point of divergence from the main line, ran the new spur, built to accommodate Pleimster after he had dug through the hill and coaxed the right-of-way owner of the true Wire Silver vein and had transferred his labor hand and his plant, or the major part of both, to the western slope of the butte, at this point no more than a narrow ridge separating the eastern and western gulches.

Train 205, with ex-Engineer Judson apparently sound asleep in one of the rearward seats of the day coach, was on time when it reached Little Butte. A moment later Judson had let himself slip into the rear vestibule of the day coach and was as silently opening the folding doors of the vestibule itself.

Thangling off by the handrails, he saw the engine's headlight pick up the switch stand of the old spur. The train was unmistakably slowing now, and he made ready to jump if the need should arise, picking his place at the track side as the train lights showed him the ground. As the speed was reduced Judson saw what he was expecting to see. Precisely at the junction of the switch passing a man descended from the forward step of the train and walked swiftly away up the unused track of the old spur. Judson's train came a moment later, and when his end of the day coach flicked past the switch stand he, too, dropped to the ground and, waiting only until he could follow without being detected.

For the tall figure, which thus seemed more than a retreating blur in the moonlight, he the moonlight. The chase led directly up the old spur, but it did not continue quite to the five mile distant end of it. A few hundred yards short of the stockade enclosing the old buildings the shadowy figure took to the forest and began to climb the ridge, going straight up, as nearly as Judson could determine. The ex-engineer followed, still keeping his distance. From the first bench above the valley level he looked back and down into the stockade enclosure. All of the old buildings were dark, but one of the two new and unpainted ones was brilliantly lighted, and there were sounds familiar enough to Judson to mark it as the Wire Silver power house. Notwithstanding his interest in the chase, Judson was curious enough to stand a moment listening to the sharply defined exhalations of the high speed steam engine driving the generators.

"Say," he ejaculated under his breath, "if that engine ain't a dead match for the old 210 pullin' a grade I don't want a cent! Double cylinder set on the quarter and choo-choo! like it ought to have a pair of steel rails under it. If I had time I'd go down yonder and break a whinler in that power shack, blamed if I wouldn't!" But unhappily there was no time to spare. As it was, he had lingered too long, and when he came out upon the crest of the narrow ridge and attained a point of view from which he could look down upon the buildings clustering at the foot of the western slope he had lost the scent. The tall man had disappeared as completely and suddenly as if the earth had opened and swallowed him.

This, in Judson's prefiguring, was a small matter. The tall man, whom the ex-engineer had unmistakably recognized at the moment of train for-saking as Rankin Hallock, was doubtless on his way to Pleimster's headquarters at the foot of the western slope. For some reason of his own Hallock did not wish to be seen going openly to the Wire Silver headquarters; hence the drop from the train at Silver Switch and the long tramp up the gulch and over the ridge.

Forecasting it thus, Judson lost no time on the summit of mysterious disappearance. Choosing the shortest path he could find which promised to lead him down to the mining hamlet at the foot of the westward fronting slope, he set his feet in it and went stumbling down the steep declivity, bringing up finally on a little bench just above the mine workings. Here he stopped to get his breath and his bearings. From his halting place the mine headquarters building lay just below him, at the right of the tunnel entrance to the mine. It was a long log building of one story.

Making a detour to do the electric lighted tunnel mouth, Judson carefully reconnoitered the office end of the headquarters building. There was a door, with steps giving upon the downhill side, and there were two windows, both of which were blank to the eye by reason of the drawn down shades. Two persons at least were in the lighted room, Judson could hear their voices, but the thick log walls muffled the sounds to an indistinct murmur. The figure of a man sitting in a chair was sharply silhouetted on the drawn window shades.

Judson stared, rubbed his eyes and stared again. It had never occurred to him before that the face of a man, viewed in blank profile, could differ so strikingly from the same face as seen eye to eye. That the man whose shadow was projected upon the window shades was Rankin Hallock he could not doubt. The bearded chin, the puffy lips and the prominent nose were all faithfully outlined in the exaggerated shadowgraph. But the hat was worn at an unfamiliar angle, and there was something in the erect, balking figure that was still more unfamiliar. Judson backed away and stared again, muttering to himself. If he had not traced Hallock almost to the door of Pleimster's quarters there might have been room for the thin edge of the doubt wedge. The unfamiliar pose and the rakish tilt of the soft hat were not among the chief clerk's remembered characteristics; but, making due allowance for the distortion of the magnified facial outline, the profile was Hallock's.

Having definitely settled for himself the question of identity, Judson renewed his search for some enveloping point of vantage. Risking the moonlight, he twice made the circuit of the occupied end of the building. There was a line of light showing under the ill fitting door, and with the top step of the downhill flight for a perching place, one might lay an ear to the crack and overhear. But door and steps were sharply struck out in the moonlight, and they faced the mining hamlet, where the men of the day shift were still working. Judson knew the temper of the Tinnayont waters. To be seen crouching on the boss' doorstep would be to take the chance of making a target of himself for the first blotter of the day shift who happened to look his way. Dismissing the risky expedient, he made a third circuit from moon glare to shadow, this time upon hands and knees. To the lowly comes the rewards of humility. Framed level upon stout log pillars on the downhill side, the headquarters warehouse and office sheltered a space beneath its floor which was roughly boarded up with slabs from the log sawing. Slab by slab the ex-engineer sought for his cat hole, trying each one softly in its turn. When there remained but three more to be tugged at the loosened one was found. Judson swung it cautiously aside and wriggled through the narrow aperture left by its removal. A crawling minute later he was crouching beneath the loosely jointed floor of the lighted room, and the arena of the ear had broadened into a fair highway.

Almost at once he was able to verify his guess that there were only two men in the room above. At all events there were only two speakers. They were talking in low tones, and Judson had no difficulty in identifying the rather high pitched voice of the owner of the Wire Silver mine. The man whose profile he had seen, on the night

Judson backed away and stared again. Under shade had the voice which belonged to the outlined features, but the listener under the floor had a vague impression that he was trying to disguise it. Judson knew nothing about the letter in which Pleimster had prompted to arrange for a meeting between Lidgerwood and the ranchman Grofield. What he did know was that he had followed Hallock almost to the door of Pleimster's office and that he had seen a shadowed face on the office window shade which could be no other than the face of the chief clerk. It was in spite of all this that the impression that the second speaker was trying to disguise his voice persisted. But the ex-engineer of fast passenger trains was able to bask in the impression after the first few minutes of eavesdropping.

Judson had scarcely found his breathing space between the floor timbers and had not yet overheard enough to give him the drift of the low toned talk when the bell of the private line telephone rang in the room above. It was Pleimster who answered the bellringer. "Hello! Yes, this is Pleimster. What's that? A message about Mr. Lidgerwood? All right; fire away."

"Who is it?" came the inquiry in the grating voice which fitted and yet did not fit the other man. The listener heard the click of the telephone cuppiece replacement.

"It's Grofield, talking from his station office at Little Butte," replied the mine owner. "The dispatcher has just called him up to say that Lidgerwood left Angels in his service car, running special, at 8:40, which would figure it here at about 11 or a little later."

"Who is running it?" inquired the other man, rather anxiously, Judson decided. "Williams and Bradford. A fool for luck every time. We might have had to wipe out a couple of our friends."

The listener under the floor had a sensation like that which might be produced by a cold wind blowing up the nose of his neck.

"There is no such thing as luck," rapped the other voice. "My time was short—after I found out that Lidgerwood wasn't coming on the passenger. But I managed to send word to Matthews and Lester, telling them to make sure of Williams and Bradford. We could spare both of them, if we have to."

"Good!" said Pleimster. "Then you had some such alternative in mind as that I have just been proposing?"

"No," was the crusty rejoinder. "I was merely providing for the hundredth chance. I don't like your alternative."

"Why don't you?"

"Well, for one thing, it's needlessly bloody. We don't have to go at this thing like a bull at a gate. I've had my finger on the pulse of things ever since Lidgerwood took hold. The dopa is working all right in a purely natural way. In the ordinary run of things it will be only a few days or weeks before Lidgerwood will throw up his hands and quit, and when he goes out I go in. That's straight goods this time."

"You thought it was before," sneered Pleimster, "and you got beautifully left." Then, "You're talking long on 'natural' and the 'ordinary run of things,' but I notice you've sneaked with Bart Rufford to put him out of the fight with a pistol bullet."

Judson felt a sudden easing of strains. He had told McCloskey that he would be willing to swear to the voice of the man whom he had overheard plotting with Rufford in Cat Higgs' back room. Afterward, after he had sufficiently remembered that a whiskey certainly might easily lead up to a sober perjury, he had admitted the possible doubt. But now Pleimster's taunt made assurance doubly sure. Moreover, the arch plotter was not denying the fact of the conspiracy with "the killer."

"Rufford is a bloodthirsty devil—like yourself," the other man was saying calmly. "As I have told you before, I've discovered Lidgerwood's weakness. He can't call a sudden bluff. Rufford's play—the play I told him to make—was to get the drop on him, send him up good and chase him out of town—out of the country. He overran his orders and went to jail for it."

"Well," said the mine owner. "Your scheme as you outlined it to me in your cipher wire this afternoon was built on this same weakness of Lidgerwood's, and I agreed to it. As I understood it, you were to tell him up here with some lie about meeting Grofield, and then one of us was to put a pistol in his face and bluff him into throwing up his job. As I say, I agreed to it. He'll have to go when the night with the men gets hot enough, but he might hold on too long for our comfort."

"Well," said Pleimster again, this time more impatiently, Judson thought. "He quivered your luyant by carefully omitting to come on the passenger, and now you propose to fall back upon Rufford's method. I don't approve."

Again the mine owner said, "Why don't you?" And the other voice took up the question argumentatively.

"First, because it is unnecessary, as I have explained. Lidgerwood is officially dead right now. When the grievance committees tell him what has been decided upon he will put on his hat and go back to wherever it was that he came from."

"And secondly," suggested Pleimster, still with the mugging sneer in his tone.

But for the quick work of ushers in the Duena Memorial Presbyterian church, the building would have been destroyed and several persons probably killed in the panic which was barely averted through heroic work by the pastor.

Suspicious looking men were found nearby and fled when questioned. An investigation of the pastor of the church disclosed the presence of a large cotton bale soaked with oil burning fiercely. Chairs had been piled nearby and the flames would have been carried to the church auditorium where the congregation was assembled, within a few minutes.
